Far in Advance of the Day Set for the Final Closing Out of Business, Thursday, June 29.

The attendance at the sale during Friday and Saturday was so far in excess of even the most sanguine expectations that doubt arises in the minds of the present management as to the possibility of continuing this sale longer than one more week. The prices were marked so low at the beginning of this remarkable selling that the publie has become frantic in an effort to not allow a distribution of these good things for some of their neighbors, but seem to want to take every offer in a bunch. You know in yesterday's ads. that it was announced that 100 curling irons would be sold, while they lasted, at 6 1-2c each. And do you believe that the women were content with one? Why, one woman took 25, and there was but one daughter in the family. Another took a dozen, and so on, in fact about 15 women cornered the curling irons and took the whole bunch-and this is true in every other department of the store.

This announcement of these instances is a criterion of what has happened, and from present indications seems bound to continue until this store is compelled to close its door, owing to complete absence of stock. This should be a warning to those who haven't been here that they had better hurry.
